NEGROS OCCIDENTAL WRITERS

Full-Text and Source Compilation

A city-organized research guide to writers, online literary texts, and reliable source locations

This edition includes complete works only where the text is in the public domain. For contemporary or still-protected works, it provides the author’s / publisher’s / journal’s source page instead of reproducing the entire text.

Prepared November 2026 • For the SUGID literary cartography project

Scope and Copyright Notes

I searched for accessible texts and bibliographic records for the writers you listed. “Full text online” does not automatically mean “free to republish.” A poem or story posted on a journal, author website, blog, or document-sharing site can still be copyrighted. This PDF therefore reproduces only the two Adelina Gurrea poems identified below as public-domain works; for the other writers it records the best located full-text pages, excerpts, official profiles, or bibliographic leads.

Location method: writers are grouped by the strongest documented connection to a Negros Occidental city or municipality. A few names in your list need clarification or have an association that differs from the city you supplied. Those cases are marked instead of being forced into a city category.

Important correction: Agnes Dakudao Locsin is a National Artist for Dance born in Davao City. The UP profile identifies Ateneo de Davao and Ohio State University in her education; I did not find reliable evidence that she is “from La Salle” or that La Salle is her hometown/educational affiliation. She is included under “Bacolod / La Salle connection to verify” only as a possible local institutional connection, not as a Negrense-born writer.

Alice Tan Gonzales: the sources found identify her as a UP Visayas writer and professor; a biographical source says she was born and raised in Bacolod. I could not independently verify the “Murcia” association you noted. Please treat that as unconfirmed pending a primary biography or the author’s confirmation.

Vince Gruyon: I could not locate a dependable author profile or literary text under this exact spelling. It may be a spelling variant; this entry is left unresolved rather than attaching texts to the wrong person.

1. La Carlota

Adelina Gurrea Monasterio (1896–1971)

Born in La Carlota, Negros Occidental, Gurrea wrote poetry, fiction, and drama in Spanish. The Instituto Cervantes biography states that she moved to Spain in 1921 and died there in 1971, while retaining her Filipino nationality. The Biblioteca Virtual Miguel de Cervantes maintains a dedicated portal with biographical material and digitized documentation related to her writing.

Complete texts included in this PDF

A. El nido (1919) — full poem, reproduced from Parnaso Filipino, an early anthology digitized by Project Gutenberg. The poem is divided into five numbered sections in the source. The original publication predates the author's death; with Gurrea's 1971 death date, the work is now out of copyright under the Philippines' life-plus-50-year term.

B. El fantasma de María Clara — full poem, reproduced from the 1961 collection Poesías dedicadas a José Rizal. The source identifies Gurrea as born in La Carlota. The poem is included as a second public-domain text.

The original Spanish spelling and punctuation have been retained as far as the digitized source allows. Minor OCR or transcription errors may remain; compare with the scans before quoting academically.

EL NIDO

Adelina Gurrea • 1919 • Spanish

(Primer premio en el concurso literario organizado por la «Casa de España», Manila, 1919)

I

Ha lanzado la paloma su quejido lastimero.
En el beso de la tierra con el cielo, muere el sol...
De la tarde el arrebol
se desmaya entre las sombras de la noche del guerrero.
El silencio de las horas enlutadas
ha rasgado los clarines del heraldo de la muerte;
hay espectros en las sombras y hay terror en las miradas
y vomitan los cañones el derecho del más fuerte.
Y ha volado la paloma de plumaje alabastrino ahuyentada por la mano poderosa del destino.

II

De su nido de ideales
sólo queda el esqueleto, ¡Seculares ambiciones!
Aquel nido que cubierto de olorosas ilusiones
orgulloso se mecía de la historia en los anales.
Más su túnica de nieve
ha rasgado el negro aullido de los vientos,
y debajo de los santos, ideales sentimientos,
son los odios un grabado, la ambición es un relieve.
Aquel nido, que era un beso
en el vivir de los hermanos corazones,
es escarnio de la fé que se deben las naciones;
y por eso
ha volado la paloma de plumaje alabastrino,
ahuyentada por la mano poderosa del destino.

III

¡Oh, la mística paloma de las pálidas canciones!
A través de nausebundas humaredas,
por encima de campiñas que atraviesan las veredas,
entre el ronco estremecer de los cañones,
entre el trueno de las turbas que fatídicas vocean
por encima de sepulcros y de alfombras funerarias,

suspirando sus plegarias,
va esfumándose su vuelo,
y se aleja con sus alas de los mundos que pelean
y se acerca con sus ansias a las cúpulas del cielo.
Ave errante y fugitiva, ave hecha de azahares,
¿Dónde buscas el encanto y el amor de tu doctrina?
¿Dónde están las resonancias de tu plática divina
y la piedra de holocausto que reclaman tus altares?
¿Dónde vas?
Si hoy el hombre irreverente
ya no quiere que te poses en su frente
palomita de la paz...
«Voy buscando» dijo ella, «algún nido hecho de amores donde vivan mis creencias, donde mueran mis dolores».
.....
Tañen lentas, compungidas, las campanas de la Francia,
y vigilan solitarios
en sus níveos sudarios
los mil picos (que se burlan de la altura y la distancia)
de los rudos Pirineos.
El blancor de su cabeza
da un aliento en su tristeza
a la reina del olivo y a sus líricos deseos.
Pero sigue su camino,
porque en ellos aun se escucha
el estruendo de la lucha,
y aun la empuja aquella mano poderosa del destino.
Ya ha pasado por encima de la típica montaña
de los místicos del norte,
y ha llegado hasta la corte,
y en el suelo de la España
se ha posado la paloma de plumaje alabastrino subyugada por un alma que es más fuerte que el destino.

IV

En el fondo dulce y cálido
de un humano corazón
ha hecho nido la paloma, mientras reza una oración

por la viuda sin amores, y los hijos del inválido.
Santo nido hecho de flores y fragancias maternales
de caricias, de ternuras
y sedientas calenturas
Por el bien de los mortales!
¡Corazón que guarda dentro
el calor de las canciones
que palpitan en los tristes corazones, que es altar, estuche, y centro
de noblezas olvidadas y de hidalgas compasiones!
¡Ruiseñor enamorado
de los cánticos del arte!
¡Corazón! Santo estandarte
de lo honrado,
donde vive la divina poesía
de la tétrica tragedia del vivir.
¡Vaso hondo del sentir!
¡Corazón que es una mezcla de tristeza y de alegría!
Que es color, canto, fragancia,
clamor, risa, luz, suspiro,
movimiento, danza, giro,
simpatía y añoranza.
Don Quijote que enloquece
acariciando una ilusión.
¡Corazón, fiel corazón.
del gran Rey Alfonso Trece!
.....
Y ha vivido la paloma de plumaje alabastrino
en el fondo de ese pecho que es más fuerte que el destino.

V

Ha cesado la matanza,
han callado los cañones,
y la voz de las naciones
la reclama una vez más con promesas de bonanza.
La paloma no se mueve. Con suspiro tenue y quedo tiembla aún de sus ansias al compás.
La paloma de la paz

todavía tiene miedo.

.....

En, la boca del monarca juguetea una sonrisa;

en el hueco de su mano aún descansa

la paloma blanca y mansa

que ha quedado para siempre convertida en su divisa.

¿Oué derecho hay en la tierra que le quite el blanco emblema,

redivivo con su aliento,

escudado con su honra, en el trágico momemto

en que quisieron arrancarle esa gloria de su lema?

En las luchas de la corte, en lia inquietud de la cabaña,

ha sabido defenderla con su pecho y con su ley,

ha sabido defenderla vuestro rey,

por la unión de sus hermanos y la gloria de su España.

EL FANTASMA DE MARÍA CLARA

Adelina Gurrea • published in a 1961 Rizal tribute collection • Spanish

El epílogo triste de tu vida se prolonga cubriendo con su gloria el silencio expresivo de la historia.
Fingiéndote dormida,
cual sonámbula audaz, en la alta noche,
caminas abordando los abismos,
y eres el albo escudo,
protector de sagrados misticismos,
y eres dorado broche
del rosario oloroso de sampagas,
emblema de virtudes femeninas,
que adoran las dalagas
nuestras dulces mujeres filipinas.

Allá en la negra noche,
rasgada por relámpagos inquietos
y llorada por negros nubarrones,
hiciste de tus lágrimas derroche,
para llorar tus retos
en un ¡ay! de deshechas ilusiones.
Muerta, mas no vencida,
tu alma extenuada y fría
comprendió la grandeza del dolor;
del dolor que afrontó con heroísmo,
para hacer de la vida
una trágica negra poesía;
para hacer del amor
un sublime grandioso fanatismo.

Source note: the digitized 1961 anthology's author note identifies Gurrea as born in La Carlota, Negros Occidental. Parenthetical explanatory notes in the source identify María Clara as the heroine of Noli Me Tangere and gloss "dalagas" as young women/maidens.

Agnes Dakudao Locsin

A National Artist for Dance, not primarily a literary author. Her choreographic works include Encantada, Babaylan, Igorot, and La Revolucion Filipina. The UP biography identifies Davao City as her birthplace and Ateneo de Davao / Ohio State as her educational institutions. If your reason for including her is a La Salle event or partnership, that is a performance/institutional connection rather than a birthplace claim.

3. Silay

F. Doreen Gamboa Fernandez (1934–2002)

Fernandez was born in Manila but grew up in Silay, Negros Occidental. She became a major cultural historian, food writer, and scholar. Her books include Sarap: Essays on Philippine Food, Tikim: Essays on Philippine Food and Culture, and Palabas: Essays on Philippine Theater History. One accessible online essay, “The Chinese Connection,” is posted on a blog and begins with her memories of growing up in Silay and eating Chinese food in Bacolod. Since it is a copyrighted essay, this compilation links to the posted text rather than reprinting it.

Silay relevance

Fernandez is especially valuable for SUGID because her writing connects everyday food practices, memory, and cultural history to specific places. A Silay entry could map the food memories in “The Chinese Connection” and cross-reference Bacolod’s restaurant and market history, while preserving the distinction between the author’s childhood recollection and official local history.

4. Binalbagan

Augurio M. Abeto (1904–1977)

Born in Binalbagan, Abeto was a Hiligaynon poet, essayist, lawyer, and politician, often called the “King of Hiligaynon Poetry.” A full text of his poem “Panay kag Negros” is posted by Buglas Writers Journal, with an English translation on the same page. “Dalawidaw” is also available online in lyric form, but the attribution and version should be checked against a reliable print source: web sources differ on dates and on whether Abeto wrote lyrics or a song text. Because Abeto died in 1977, his works are not yet public domain in the Philippines in 2026; this PDF links to the full online pages without copying them.

5. Bago

Orland Agustin Solis

A Hiligaynon poet and fiction writer from Bago City. Thrive Art Projects describes him as having grown up on an hacienda in Bago. His work focuses on farmers, rural life, memory, folklore, and the hinterlands of Negros Occidental. The literary journals TLDTD, Exchanges, and MAYDAY host full texts of selected poems or translations. These are contemporary copyrighted works, so this sourcebook gives links rather than republishing the full poems.

7. Murcia — author connection to verify

Alice Tan Gonzales

Your note places Alice Gonzales under Murcia. The reliable sources located for this compilation do not confirm a Murcia birthplace or residence. One biographical source says she was born and raised in Bacolod; UP Visayas materials identify her as a faculty member and Hiligaynon writer. Until the Murcia connection is confirmed, list her under Bacolod / UP Visayas and add a note that the Murcia association is unverified.

Best next step for SUGID

For each town, select one text whose setting or local connection can be verified. Record the exact publication source, author, date, language, and permission status. For online full texts that remain copyrighted, link to the authorized page and use only short, attributed excerpts in the app. For oral literature, obtain informed consent from the speaker and preserve the original-language version alongside any translation.

This compilation is a research aid, not a definitive bibliography. Recheck metadata, spelling, publication dates, and rights before formal publication.
